

What is discrimination?

Discrimination is a choice. Everyone discriminates. To discriminate is to be human. We all have likes and dislikes. Some people like ketchup, others prefer mustard. It is through the act of choosing that we define who we are. For example, who do we discriminate against at our meetings? We meet in a non-smoking facility, so we discriminate against smokers. We discriminate against people who are not of average size—all the chairs are the same. We discriminate against people who live far away. And we discriminate against late-comers. To not discriminate is to have no boundaries.

Having said that, there is fair and unfair discrimination. Let's say I go to Indianapolis and apply to play basketball for the Indiana Pacers. It is likely they would not hire me. If so, they have discriminated against me. They have chosen others instead of me. If they choose to not hire me because they believe others are better at basketball than me, they are perfectly justified. Nonetheless, it would be normal for me to feel excluded and rejected and disappointed. Not being chosen hurts regardless of the reason. We are not talking here about discrimination under the law. However, if the Pacers refused to hire me because of the color of my skin or the clothes I wear, that would be unfair discrimination. But either way, fair or unfair, discrimination hurts, the feelings are real, and they need to be voiced.

What is Get Real About Discrimination?

GRAD was founded by Kay Johnson in 2008. GRAD's primary activity is sponsoring free personal empowerment groups. The Get Real Empowerment Group is a healthy place to experience self-actualization. It is a place for participants to voice their feelings about and experiences of discrimination, mistreatment and rejection. It is also a place for listeners to become educated about what discrimination looks and feels like. By encouraging those who have experienced discrimination to express themselves publicly without judgment or criticism we promote healing and we practice becoming a conscious and loving community.

Sharing— A time for each participant to speak in a small group without interruption about any of their personal experiences using ‘I’ language; and for everyone to practice listening without judgment, criticism, crosstalk or feedback.

Personal Responsibility— A time for each participant to self-evaluate how well they adhered to the Get Real Empowerment Group guidelines.

Feelings of Mistreatment— A time for each participant to state whether or not they feel mistreated or discriminated against during the meeting.

Closing— A time to join hands, sing and ‘let our light shine’ to celebrate each other and ourselves.

‘Grant me the serenity,
To accept the things I cannot change;
Courage to change the things I can;
And the wisdom to know the difference.’
—Anonymous

“Following the Golden Rule is a policy of discrimination. You are favoring those like you and excluding those who are unlike you. ‘Do unto others as you would have done unto you.’ It only works if everyone is the same—i.e. like you.”
—Kay Johnson

“Our lives begin to end the day we become silent about things that matter.”
—Martin Luther King, Jr.

“Our deepest fear is not that we are inadequate. Our deepest fear is that we are powerful beyond measure. It is our light, not our darkness that most frightens us. We ask ourselves, Who am I to be brilliant, gorgeous, talented, fabulous? Actually, who are you not to be?... Your playing small does not serve the world. There is nothing enlightened about shrinking so that other people won't feel insecure around you. We are all meant to shine, as children do... And as we let our own light shine, we unconsciously give other people permission to do the same. As we are liberated from our own fear, our presence automatically liberates others.”
—Marianne Williamson
